

SINGULARITY WINS DELOITTE FAST 50 FOR 7TH CONSECUTIVE TIME

Derry, 20 October 2008

Leading Business Process Management software company Singularity announced today that it has been included in the Deloitte Fast 50 Ireland Awards for the seventh consecutive year. The Deloitte awards go to the 50 fastest growing technology companies in Ireland. The awards are based on an independent ranking system focusing on continued revenue growth over the last five years.

Singularity, a specialist in Business Process Management software, was founded in 1994 and is now a multi-million dollar operation with offices across Europe, the US and Asia. The high tech firm has experienced continuous rapid annual growth in revenue and profitability since its inception.

Singularity's Marketing Manager Michael White said "Winning this award for the seventh time in succession is fantastic. Our success is due to a consistent investment in developing innovative technology while hiring and cultivating the best people. We fully intend to be in the award-winners list again next year".

The Deloitte Fast 50 awards ceremony took place in the Guinness Storehouse on October 16th. Industry figures speaking at the event included John McElligott, Director of Strategy and M & A at eBay and David Tansley, Partner, Technology, Media and Telecommunications, Deloitte UK.

Announcing the winners of the Technology Fast 50 program, David Coates, Associate Partner with Deloitte, Belfast said: "Congratulations to our 2008 Fast 50 winners - their success is indicative of the innovative technology companies present in Ireland. To have 16 new companies in the awards is a true sign of the talent and creative thinking that is present in the technology industry in Ireland. It is this innovation and fresh thinking that will ensure Ireland's continued success in this competitive industry."

The Fast 50 program started in San Jose, the centre of Silicon Valley, California in 1995 and has expanded to over 20 major cities world-wide. It quickly became the growth benchmark of success in the USA, and has now gained significant adoption in Europe.
